Question: Comments on course effectiveness

Rob consistently and successfully morphed the class into a discussion where students were encouraged to participate. I felt like I learned the content material more efficiently because we were constantly prompted to think about concepts outside of the box. The topics were diversified enough so that we were able to learn different technological aspects whether it were time periods or cultural changes. I thought that the weekly forums were a good way to get students to reflect on what they've been learning about. I would love to see a continuation of this class offered, "Communication and Technology II."

The readings were great and very appropriate for all levels of students in this course. The professor created an environment that prompted and invited questions and discussions. Listening to the graduate presentations was really interesting.

He asked us very appropriate and topical questions related to the topics and contemporary issues. He was friendly and willing to review assignments.
